Norton Rides Man Across River, But Has to Swim Back

Obliging Mexican Ferries Him Over Rio Grande on Shoulders

THE FERRY IS GONE

Returning, He Tries It Alone, Battling Icy Torrent

Editor's Note: This is the sixth of a series of nine letters written by S. G. Norton, 520 North Hervey street, this city, to Sam E. McMath, former Hope man now living at Bisbee, Ariz., in which Mr. Norton tells thrilling chapters from his life in the 80's. Star readers will remember Mr. McMath's two series of letters on his experiences along the Mexican border—but this time it is Mr. Norton who is telling the story:

Dear Sam: In January 1881, I left Tombstone, Arizona, and went to the front construction camp of the Southern Pacific Ry. which at that time, was slowly crawling toward El Paso.

When I reached the camp, then at a place called Deming, but afterwards changed to Rio Hondo, the railroad had been extended eastward for several miles. The town we know today as Deming was later established at a point ten miles west of Rio Hondo.

In company with two other adventurers, I rode a material train to the end of the track and from there, walked to Mesilla, a Mexican town about forty miles northwest of El Paso. I had no particular reason for going to Mesilla, more than a desire to be roving about, seeing new country and meeting strange people.

Mesilla is on the east side of the Rio Grande, and in those days was headquarters for the Norton-Stuart Stage line running through Cook's Canyon to Silver City.

After a twenty-five mile hike my companions and I reached the west bank of the Rio Grande opposite Mesilla. Seeing a Mexican on the east side we yelled to attract his attention, and asked how we could get across. He yelled back that he would carry us across for a dollar per man. By what means he intended to transport us we didn't know, but when we accepted his terms he removed his trousers, waded the river at shallow spots and carried us over one at a time on his shoulders! Being January, the water was cold and cakes of ice were floating with the current. The Mexican waded his way slowly and carefully to avoid stepping into deep holes and maybe spilling his passengers into the icy water.

No doubt a great many people will be surprised to learn that this river must be remembered that this river

Lone Handwriting Expert Opposes 8, Speaks for Bruno

John M. Trendley Denies Hauptmann Wrote Ransom Notes

DROP FISCH STORY

Defense Counsel Abandon Theory Dead Man Kidnaped, Slew Baby

Copyright Associated Press
FLEMINGTON, N. J.—(AP)—The combined opinion of eight state experts th. Bruno Richard Hauptmann wrote the Lindbergh ransom notes was disputed Friday by the first defense expert, and Hauptmann's attorneys formally disclaimed part of the so-called "Fisch myth."

Former intimations that the dead Isidor Fisch might have written the notes or kidnaped and slain the Lindbergh baby, were wiped away by Defense Attorney Reilly.

Hauptmann's first handwriting expert disputed the evidence of his eight opposing fellow craftsmen, and declared Hauptmann was not the writer of the notes.

John M. Trendley, the expert, gave his opinion shortly after the trial resumed Friday morning.

Trendley had qualified as an expert Thursday over the objection of the state.

Life in a Juryroom
FLEMINGTON, N. J.—(AP)—Private lives of eight men and four women, segregated from the world to decide one man's fate, revolve about those immediate little commonplaces—a "smoke" food, a parlor game, a fall from bed.

To the Hauptmann jury the world has been circumscribed by little more than four walls.

Three of the women on the jury smoke. They complained vigorously one night when cigarettes were not passed around after dinner.

The biggest protest came from Mrs. Verna Snyder, No. 3 juror, who has turned to tobacco since beginning of the tedious trial existence. Mrs. Rosie Hill, the widow who does head work, is the only woman juror who refuses cigarettes.

Falls From Bed
Mrs. Snyder has just recovered from a recent minor accident—she fell out of bed two nights ago, after eating mince pie at dinner, and suffered minor bruises.

Mrs. Pearl Conover, one of the women constables, rushed into her room after hearing a noise and helped the No. 3 juror get back to bed.

Lisbon Case, carpenter, is still taking his meals in his room because of a heart ailment which he thought was aggravated by climbing stairs.

Six of the other jurors have a vegetarian diet at dinner, and instead of an entree, order a vegetable or fruit salad. George Voorhees, one of the jurors, is still eating his steaks and chops.

Pachelor Most Particular
The juror hardest to please at breakfast is Robert Cravatt, the only bachelor in the box. Cravatt, who is education director of a CCC camp, insists on having his eggs baked.

The jury passes long evening hours playing a parlor game with numbered cards and little wooden blocks. The game was presented to Sheriff John H. Curtis by a Chicago woman who attended several sessions of the trial and worried about the jurors' entertainment.

Mrs. Snyder, wife of a blacksmith, has had emissaries buy her two new dresses since the trial began. One is black, with a round white collar and a pretty bow, and the other is a gray print, with red roses on a blue ground.

Big Boulder Dam Completed Friday

Forms Artificial Lake 11 Times Larger Than Any Other

BOULDER CITY, Nev.—(AP)—A huge gate will drop shut Friday and the flow of the Colorado river will be stopped. The chocolate waters then will leave the base of Boulder dam, the greatest structure of its kind in the world.

This will begin the formation of a lake 11 times larger than man ever built before. It will mark the turning of the Colorado.

Construction work was started on the dam September 17, 1930. Congress allotted $70,000,000 for the dam and reservoir; $38,200,000 for power development; $39,500,000 for the All-American canal, work on which was commenced, and $17,700,000 for interest while construction is in progress.

In addition to this Metropolitan Water District is engaged in a $22,000,000 project to carry water to Southern California communities. This is the project for which Parker dam is being built.

Hope and Warren Scheduled in Two Contests Friday

Bradley County Quintet Has Beaten Camden and Others

NIGHT GAME AT 7:30

Hope-Guernsey and Columbus-Guernsey Games Same Night

Capacity crowds are expected to witness basketball games here Friday afternoon and night between Hope and Warren High Schools.

Warren, 1931 state champions and a runner-up for the title a year later, will furnish the Bobcats with the strongest opposition encountered thus far, reports indicate.

With victories over Camden and other outstanding south Arkansas quintets, Warren bolsters another formidable team this year. The Bobcats barely nixed out Camden here several nights ago.

The matinee affair starts at 3:30 p. m., with the second game at 7:30. A preliminary game between the Hope B team and the Guernsey B team has been arranged for 6:45 p. m.

Following the night game between Hope and Warren, a contest will be played between Columbus and Guernsey senior boys teams.

Fans will be admitted at no extra cost, Coach Foy Hammons announced. Hope's probable starting lineup for the afternoon game will be: Turner and Reece, forwards; Kennedy, center; England and Stone, guards.

If the first combination fails, Coach Hammons said he would probably resort to Cargile and Ramsey.

Federal Job Fund Fast Disappearing

Passage of Social Security Law by February 15 'Impossible'

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—Dwindling cash resources put federal aid for the jobless on a day-a-day basis Friday and focused the capital's attention anxiously on the senate committee which is studying the work relief bill.

Federal Relief Administrator Hopkins said that the administration is down to 50 million dollars and is making no commitments beyond February 10.

Chairman Pat Harrison of the senate finance committee said "there is not a chance in the world" for Congress to pass the administration's social security bill by mid-February.

Secretary Perkins has urged. Harrison predicted there were changes in the program but said that on the whole the measure would be approved.

Gloss Hits Relief Bill
WASHINGTON.—(AP)—Senator Carter Glass, Democrat, Virginia, frowned Thursday night as he charged the administration had failed thus far to submit a definite program to the senate appropriations committee as to how the president's $4,880,000,000 relief fund will be handled and spent.

This assertion came at the end of four days of hearings during which leading administration advocates of the state supply part of the money required for relief to the needy.

Hauptmann's Wife Gets Advice

His own ordeal on the witness stand ended, Bruno Hauptmann depended on his wife, Anna, to strengthen his abi for the important dates in the Lindbergh kidnapping mystery. Separated here by the sturdy arm of a New Jersey State Trooper, Hauptmann, emphasizing his words with pointing finger discusses matters with her in Hunterdon County (N. J.) court before she was called to testify.

3 Amendments to Sales Tax Adopted

They Exempt Property on Which Privilege Tax Is Collected

LITTLE ROCK.—(AP)—The senate Friday adopted three additional amendments to the sales tax bill and passed a house bill creating a State Planning Board.

One of the amendments to the sales tax bill exempts tangible and personal property on which there is a privilege tax, such as cigarettes and gasoline.

The State Planning Board bill probably will be sent to the governor Friday for signature.

In the meantime the house passed the "pure election" bill, which seeks to cure the alleged evils surrounding the wholesale buying of poll taxes.

A bill by Mason, of Ouachita county, which should abolish the second division of circuit court in Ouachita and Union counties; was passed by the house. Crawford, of Union, cast the only vote against the bill.

Income Tax Issue
LITTLE ROCK.—(AP)—The courts should hold that an income tax is not a property, excise, privilege or personal tax, House Bill 208 by Thompson of Hempstead should not become effective through majority passage by the legislature and signature by the governor, attorneys said Thursday.

Since the measure proposes to increase the income tax rate, under Amendment 19, it would require submission to the voters or emergency adoption by the legislature by a three-fourths vote of both houses, or 75 votes in the house and 27 in the senate.

The supreme court could hold that the income tax is not a property, excise, privilege or personal tax (which are named in Amendment 19.) without undertaking to say what sort of a tax it actually is, lawyers pointed out.

Income taxes per $1,000 of income under the present law and under the proposed law are shown in the following table:

Income	Present	H. G. 208, Law
$1,000	$15	$10
1,000	20	10
1,000	25	10
1,000	30	20
1,000	35	20
1,000	40	20
1,000	45	30
1,000	50	30
1,000	55	30
1,000	60	30
$10,000	$375	$210

The second $10,000 income would add $200 to the tax under the proposed law, as compared with $300 under the present law.

Automobile Code Extended to June

Provides for Annual Shows in Fall Instead of January

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, announced Friday that organized labor "would not accept" the automobile code which was extended by President Roosevelt Thursday night to June 16.

Green issued this statement to the senate judiciary subcommittee considering the 30-hour week proposal.

Auto Code Extended
WASHINGTON.—(AP)—President Roosevelt Thursday night extended the automobile code through June 16 with amendments designed to spread employment.

The amendment called for an agreement among the auto makers to hold the auto shows and to bring out new models in the fall instead of in January, and for the manufacturer to pay time and a half for overtime of more than 48 hours a week.

An additional amendment provided that the manufacturer should continue to abide by the labor relations agreement which ended the strike last spring.

This amendment dashed the hopes of the American Federation of Labor that Mr. Roosevelt would throw out the National Auto Labor Board "for proportionate representation."

A few hours before midnight, expiration date of the present code, representatives of the auto makers and NRA carried to the White House their effort to arrange finally the terms of the agreement.

With Donald Richberg and S. Clay Williams, NRA Administration Board chairman, were Walter P. Chrysler of Chrysler Motors and Alfred P. Sloan of General Motors.

GLORIFYING YOURSELF

By Alicia Hart

Beauty is Involved in Triangle.

Start a discussion on the correct way to apply cream rouge and almost immediately you'll discover two schools of thought. One insists that you should put a dot of the rouge in the center of your cheek and then blend it outward from the center of the dot until the cheek is well colored and there are no conspicuous edges. The other advocates the triangle method which I think is easier and better, especially for beginners.

After smoothing on foundation lotion, brush your forehead lightly across cleansing cream, dip it in the rouge pot and place it well up on the cheek bone and quite near your nose. Make one streak straight outward toward your ear. Then go back to the starting point and draw another line down and out. In other words, draw two sides of a triangle.

Now, using deft, light touches, fill in the triangle. When you have finished, carefully blend the edges so there will be no conspicuous lines to show where the rouge stops and your natural color begins. Naturally, you can't keep people from knowing that you use rouge (and why should you try?), but you certainly can apply it in such expert fashion that they'll never be conscious of it.

Remember that rouge is used to make you look healthy. Put it exactly where your own color shows after you have been exercising violently. If you can't remember how you looked after the last game of tennis, pinch your cheeks until the blood comes to the surface. Where it shows are the places your cream rouge should be blended.

...NEXT...Don'ts concerning rouge.

SILKEN SPINDLES

by Laura Lu Brookman © 1935 NEA SERVICE, INC.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

GALE HENDERSON, pretty and 20, works in a silk mill. She and her 19-year-old brother, PHIL, support their invalid father.

STEVE MEYERS, who also works in the mill asks Gale to marry him. She promises to give him an answer in a few days.

Later that evening Gale goes skating on the river, goes through the ice and is rescued by BRIAN WESTFORD, whose father, now dead, built the mill. Brian asks Gale to wait while he gets his car but when he returns she is gone.

Brian has come home after two years in Paris, convinced he can never be an artist and eager to go to work in the mill. VICKY THATCHER, daughter of ROBERT THATCHER, general manager of the mill, schemes to capture Brian.

Recognizes her. Next evening he asks her if he can walk home with her. Gale refuses but Steve sees her talking to Brian. Steve is jealous and he and Gale quarrel.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XIV

GALE had said to Steve, "I never want to see you again."

But of course she did see him. At noon next day she came face to face with him in a corridor of the mill. He was standing with a group of men and one of them—Tim Regan—raised a hand in salute and called, "Hi, Gale!"

Gale looked at Tim and smiled. "Hello," she said, and hurried past without a second glance.

She saw Steve again at closing time. He was standing outside the big gate, talking to a girl in a green coat.

The girl was laughing as Gale and Josie Gridley came down the walk together.

"Hi," Josie said, "looks like somebody's beating your time."

"I guess you're right," Gale agreed. She went on talking rapidly about the difficulty the Shaltzes had had, finding names for their new twins.

They passed Steve and the girl in green. Josie said, "Hi," but Gale had turned and was looking in the opposite direction.

"Say!" Josie exclaimed, "you and Steve ain't had a quarrel, have you?"

"No."

"Well, gee, it looks like it—the way you went by without even speaking! What?" the matter? What'd he do to make you sore?"

It wouldn't do to have Josie Gridley broadcasting the situation. Gale said, "There's nothing the matter only—well, Steve and I have been seeing too much of each other lately. I don't think it's a good idea."

"Listen, you can talk," Josie said wisely, "but you aren't foolin' me. You two've had a quarrel and you'd better get over it. There aren't many guys like Steve around. Gee, if I thought you was really through, I'd make a play for him myself!"

"Go ahead," Gale told her.

But Josie shook her head. "No," she said. "You don't mean any of that you've been sayin', 'That's just talk. But if I was you I wouldn't risk losin' Steve. Say—' with sudden interest. 'It isn't anything about that red-head back there—Dolores What's-her-name, is it?"

Gale was annoyed. She didn't like this question. "No," she said, "Steve and I didn't have a quarrel over another girl, if that's what you want to know."

"Well, I can tell you one thing," Josie went on sagely, "there are plenty of girls in this town who'd be tickled to death to go around with Steve Meyers and, if you don't look out, one of 'em will snap him up when you aren't lookin'! These 'understandings' between fellows and girls that drag on for years are the bunk! First thing you know, somebody else comes along and the guy steps out on you. That's the way it was with Ella Martin. You know, her and that Collins boy—"

"Yes, I know," Gale agreed quickly.

"A girl's a fool to let herself in for anything like that," Josie went on. "If you're crazy about a guy and he's crazy about you—I say, marry him. Everybody's gotta take chances. If you don't, where'll you be? All by yourself, that's where."

An old maid. There ain't enough men to go around these days—not the kind anybody wants, anyhow. A girl's got to take the best she can get."

They had come to the corner where Josie took one street and Gale another. Gale said, "Maybe you're right, Josie. When are you going to be married?"

"Just as soon as I can get that dumb-headed Bill Klein to think he's asked me."

Gale laughed. "Well—see you tomorrow," she called, as she went on alone.

There was no use being annoyed at Josie's curiosity. Josie was merely being herself. She was good-hearted, too. Generous. Yes, Josie was certainly one of those who "meant well."

But the conversation had its disturbing effects. As Gale moved about the kitchen, as she peeled potatoes and put them on to boil and sliced cold meat left from the night before Josie's words came back to her. "Everybody's gotta take chances. If you don't, where'll you be? All by yourself—that's where."

Suddenly Gale envisioned the years ahead. What did they hold for her? What could they hold? The break with Steve was complete; she could never forgive the things he had said or the fact that he had not trusted her. Oh, yes, everything was over between them. She had thought that he loved her, but of course he hadn't. She hadn't led him either, and it was a good thing to know it. Now, before it was too late—

Love was something Gale had scarcely thought of during the past two years. She'd been too busy. Her days were crowded with work and worry and the struggle to keep their home going. Gale had thought of little else. Never of gay times and admirers and romance, as most girls her age do.

Other girls in the mill village thought of those things. There was social life—of a kind—among the mill workers. There were dances in the square, barn-like structure known as "Dreamland," half a mile from town where music was furnished by a player piano and where boys and girls from the mill often gathered on Saturday nights. There were movies and there were parties sometimes.

Gale heard about these parties, though she didn't attend. There were always too many things to do. She and Steve had had good times, though—long walks on Sunday afternoons, picnics in summer and skating or coasting with the youngsters in winter. Movies occasionally. Games of checkers and rummy in the warm, spic-and-pan kitchen while the cold wind raged outside.

Those good times were over now. Even the friendship with Steve that had helped so much when times were hard—was gone. Steve was no longer her friend. He had said cruel, forgettable things. Unforgivable things. Steve had turned against her.

She placed the food on the table and called her father and Phil. The meal was soon over; none of the three, apparently, were in the mood for conversation. Phil left the house while Gale was stacking the dishes and her father returned to his reading.

GALE finished the work in the kitchen and went into the living room. Her father looked up from his book inquiringly, then went on reading.

She sank into a chair and traced the pattern of the carpet with her toe. There were dozens of things she should be doing—

Gale sat up very straight. "Father," she said, "do you mind if I leave you for a little while? I'd like to go skating."

"Alone?"

"There'll be others there. I just feel I'd like to get out for a little while. I won't be gone long."

"I'll be all right," her father assured her, "but wrap up well. You don't want to catch cold."

Gale hurried into her leather jacket and cap, went to the kitchen for her skates. Five minutes later she was on her way to the river.

There was no moonlight tonight but a fire was blazing on the river bank near the boat house. Gale was surprised to see how few were skating. Mostly youngsters.

She sat down on a log and strapped on her skates. She'd have a good half hour of skating—not getting too far from the others this time—and go home.

She cut off across the ice with long, graceful strokes. A minute before she had been tired but now the tiredness was forgotten. Faster and faster she went. The blood tingled in her fingertips and in her cheeks.

A figure skating ahead of her suddenly turned. Gale did not recognize the young man until he saw that it was Brian Westmore. He came up, grinning. "Well," he said, "I'm in luck at last! I was hoping to find you here. Shall we skate?"

He held out his hands and Gale took them. She prayed that Brian Westmore might not hear the terrible beating of her heart.

YOUR HEALTH

By DR. MORRIS FISHER

Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygiea, the Health Magazine

Some Found Sensitive to Popular Drug

One of the most significant observations of the last few years has been the discovery that certain people are sensitive to the drug called amidiopyrine, or pyramidon, and that they respond to the taking of this drug with a sudden drop in the white blood cells.

This is most serious, because the white blood cells are responsible for protection of the human body against infection.

A vast amount of this drug is taken for relief of pain. The drug also is taken in combinations with other drugs in the form of various sleeping remedies, which are now exceedingly popular in this country.

These sleeping remedies contain mixtures of various substances related to the barbituric acid derivatives, such as luminal, dial, amytal and nembutal, and also "the mixture known as allonal."

A Danish investigator recently made a special study of some patients who seemed to have this sensitivity. In one case the patient had 9200 white cells for each cubic millimeter of blood. He was given 3 grains of pyramidon by mouth and his blood cells counted every half hour for a period of three or four days.

His white cell count fell in 14 hours from 9000 to 1900, then rose steadily in the next three hours to 11,500, and after that fell off again to 2000 in the next 24 hours. Then it began to rise, reaching 10,400 on the 10th day.

As the white blood cell count dropped, the patient was exceedingly sick. Since so many millions of doses of such drugs are taken regularly and only a few hundred of these cases are reported, there are undoubtedly not a great many people who are sensitive, but this has not yet been determined.

It seems, however, that there is a sensitivity and that it is associated in some way with condition of the cells concerned and perhaps with the glands of internal secretion.

A sensitive person, taking a very small dose of pyramidon, may have a violent action on the white blood cells, an action which is felt by some persons as long as 12 days after taking the drug.

Enough evidence has been accumulated to indicate that the taking of this drug is responsible for the vast majority of cases of agranulocytosis. While the condition may be caused by other drugs, such as the benzene derivatives, gold, salvarsan and dinitrophenol, the greater majority of cases are due to amidiopyrine, or pyramidon.

It is an interesting fact that publication of information that agranulocytosis could be produced by amidiopyrine resulted in the disappearance of such cases in the records of one of the largest hospitals in Denmark.

Five cases were seen in that hospital from August up to December, 1933, but after the facts were announced no other cases appeared from August to December, 1934.

A BOOK A DAY

By BRUCE CATTON

Killing Auntie Was a Big Job, After All—Yours in This Novel Made Three Tries at Homicide

If you ever had a maiden aunt toward whom you sometimes felt strong homicidal impulses, you will get a great deal of enjoyment out of "The Murder of My Aunt," by Richard Hull. As a matter of fact, you'll enjoy it anyway, because it's a swell book.

It tells about a pampered young party-waist who lives with and on his aunt on the edge of a small town in Wales. The young man has to stay with her because she has all the money, but he doesn't like the town, the country or her, and his one dream is to get away from it all.

Thus the idea of murder occurs to him, and he starts scheming. With infinite care he devises a plan for wrecking her auto, with her in it; it works, but she escapes with nothing worse than a bump on the head.

So then, in a nice thoughtful way, he cooks up a scheme for burning the house down in the dead of night—again with auntie inside. This scheme also flops.

So, finally, he is driven to the idea of poison. And while he lays the most elaborate of his plans, auntie catches on—because all his plans, after all, are pretty half-witted—and the climax of the book is both unexpected and gratifying.

This book probably should be classed as a mystery story, but it's really something pretty special; a rare blend of light humor and grisly suspense, told with a skill which marks Mr. Hull as an author to watch for.

He has, as they say in the baseball parks, plenty on the ball.

Published by Minton, Balch and Co., the book sells at $2.

YOUR CHILDREN

By Olive Roberts-Barton

Cooly May Be Substituted For Child's Misbehavior

While many mothers today know the value of the "substitution" method in handling young children, it may pay to review it again and refresh our minds about the why's and wherefore's.

It is nothing new. I often wonder if there is anything new in child training—those wise old grandmothers of ours used so many tricks which we now call by important names.

Who was it that took bumpy Mary on her knees and quickly began to click her knitting needles to make her laugh? Who said when Jimmy was acting naughty, "Come here and I'll give you a cookie?"

Nothing in the world but our dressed-up harangues on "diverted impulse." We thought Granny was spoiling the babies and the next generation came along and said, "Nonsense. You are too easy with them. They need to learn to take orders and understand what 'don't' means."

But just as it takes three generations, as they say, from shirt sleeve to shirt sleeves, so has the third generation revived Grandma, but on a course with high-faluting names.

Why is diverted impulse such a good thing? Why, with little children especially, is it constructive rather than destructive?

Because human nature is what it is. Nothing in the world is sweeter than the forbidden.

The mind once set on something it wants to do won't give up that idea and will go at it again in one form or another, unless something else quite as attractive is supplied.

Now, of course, a busy mother won't always be able to rush for a cookie when Jimmy is bad, or hurry to get him his wagon when he begins to fiddle with the paring knife, or tell him a story about polite little Timothy when he has been using rough language. Besides, Jimmy has to learn something what unqualified obedience is, whether his behavior is thing so or not.

Punishment Loses Its Value

A certain amount of substituting is always possible. And this leaves an impression with the child.

Irritations from being chortled away smacked away or jerked away from his heart's desire accumulate. In time he gets the idea that his mother is more concerned with his unhappiness and discomfort than with the lamp or the clock or the paring knife. Once he absorbs this reasonable idea he is on the defensive always, and the experimental bad boy becomes the real defiant bad boy. But if he knows his mother is reasonable, he will not be long learning that unqualified obedience, obeying orders promptly, isn't a hard thing.

Substitution Ideas

Diverting a sordid yimpulse, or substituting as we call it, is excellent in handling the child of three or four or five. But one more matter should be mentioned. If a child has enough variety of things to do and enough change of toys, he will be too busy to get into real mischief.

"Bored is bad" is as true of tots as it is of grown-ups.

Classification of individuals as to their susceptibility to certain diseases by means of fingerprinting is a possibility of the future, according to Dr. Poll, eminent Berlin physician.

Weekly Sunday School Lesson

Peter's Restoration

Text: John 21:11-19

The International Uniform Sunday School Lesson for February 3.

By W. E. GILROY, D. D.
Editor of Advance

Peter's restoration came partly with the sincerity of his repentance. When, after the cock had crowed the third time and Peter, remembering the words of Jesus, had gone out and wept bitterly, the first step in his restoration had been accomplished. But the full restoration was yet to come.

How anxious the days must have been for Peter following his denial of the Master! What grim tragedy must have entered his soul when he realized that they had taken his master and crucified him!

It was the disappointment of his hopes, because it is doubtful whether Peter, prior to Calvary, had quite realized that Jesus was not going to establish an earthly kingdom. He had left his fishermen's nets to follow Jesus with a vision of glory for himself in a kingdom that he expected Jesus was going to set up on earth.

The adjustments to a different sort of kingdom—a kingdom in which the strong should serve the weak and the great should be those who would serve—were not easy. Various incidents show how slow Peter was in grasping the truth.

But Peter, during these days of tragedy, must have thought a great deal. It is possible that new meanings of the life and ministry of Jesus came to him, though, at the dark moment following the crucifixion, his hopes seemed disappointed and he seemed ready to return to his fishermen's nets with a sense of a great hope and a great tragedy that had passed from his life.

It was under these circumstances that Jesus came to him, and it was to Peter, with these questionings in his heart, that the Resurrection restored faith, and in bringing him back to faith and hope brought into his life again all the power of his deep allegiance and devotion.

There is a prophetic keenness in the questions that Jesus asked him three times and in the response that Jesus gave to Peter's reply: "Simon, son of Jonas lovest thou me more than these?"

Peter was no longer boastful; he was not sure that he excited anyone else in his love of the Master; and this was his simple profession, "Yea, Lord, Thou knowest that I love Thee."

Then it was that Jesus gave him a simple task, not one of glory, not that of sitting near a throne, not that of some sublimely magnificent service rendered in the glory of great reward.

There is a prophetic keenness in the questions that Jesus asked him three times and in the response that Jesus gave to Peter's reply: "Simon, son of Jonas lovest thou me more than these?"

seasonal merchandise notably apparel, fuel and certain drugs and chemicals. The bulk in industrial activities incident in the holiday and inventorying periods was of shorter duration than has been the case during the past several seasons, the review stated.

In the iron and steel industry, it pointed out, a number of plants which usually remain idle until after the middle of January resumed production before that time. This was true particularly of stove and jobbing foundries, and the farm implement industry.

December retail trade, as reflected in department store sales in principal cities of the district, was 10.2 per cent greater than for the same month in 1933, and 50.4 per cent greater than in November, 1934.

Before attempting to adjust brakes, the pressure in all tires should be equal.

A shock absorber which is permitted to become stiff or uncoiled will cause a car to pull to the right or left.

but a very simple thought very necessary thing—"Feed my lambs."

Again the question, again Peter's avowal, and again the simple admonition of Jesus, "Tend my sheep." And then the third time the question and the deeper intensity of Peter's avowal, "Lord, Thou knowest all things; Thou knowest that I love Thee." But the same simple task of service, "Feed my sheep."

Then came the words, manifestly written some years after, prophetic in their reference to the death and martyrdom that Peter was to endure for his Master.

The whole story of the lesson must be read in relation to Peter's entire life. Its full import, and teaching for us are derived only when we relate it thus to the whole life of Peter and to our lives.

Here was a man of most impetuous character with an intense ambition to excel and to find a foremost place, whose fisherman's life was enriched with dreams of his place in a Messianic kingdom; and yet in the great climax of his life he finds his greatest mission in a simple task.

Is it not so concerning all of us? It is the things that we despise that, if we but knew it, would make us great. It is the things that so often we disregard that would lead us much nearer, if we only knew it, both to God and to man.

the measure, including Harry L. Hopkins, relief administrator, testified.

Glass, who has shown displeasure with provisions of the bill which proposed to extend executive authority, is chairman of the Appropriations Committee. He said:

"I think the fate of this bill lies in this committee, subject, of course, to conference between the house and senate. In what form it will be reported no one knows."

Secretary Ickes will be called Friday as the last of the government witnesses.

Efforts to whip the measure into shape for Senate action next week are to be made Saturday, Senator Glass said.

"No one has told us the projects that are to be undertaken," he said "I do not know what kind of set-up the president intends to have. I don't think anybody knows or can tell how the money is to be expended."

"The Virginian said Hopkins 'denied' that he had any part in drafting the bill, but said he is for it," Hopkins, he said, explained the Relief Administration only had about $20,000,000 left and that it would be exhausted at the present rate on about February

Aviation Plans to Put America First

Trans-Oceanic Services Part of New Roosevelt Program

WASHINGTON — (AP) — New plans for putting the nation in a top-notch world aeronautical position were given congress Thursday by President Roosevelt.

Along with the recommendations of the special aviation commission, including proposals for developing trans-oceanic services, the president submitted his own ideas for centralizing federal supervision over all forms of transportation.

Hopkins meanwhile announced an increase in relief rolls from November to December, and an increase in expenditures also. He reported 4,415,273 families on relief in the latter month.

Eight hundred and eighty million of the $1,880,000,000, in the work bill is carried for relief. Senator Glass said it had been suggested that the $880,000,000 be separated from the work fund. He doubted it would be.

Efforts to get a breakdown on projects to be undertaken to put 3,500,000 men now on the dole to work, Glass said, had failed, despite the insistence of the committee that such information be given. He said Rear Admiral Christian J. Peoples, chief of the Treasury's Procurement Division, submitted only the report of projects of the National Resources Board aggregating about $40,000,000,000.

Texas Moves to Repeal Race Bets

Merchants Complain of Fearful Drain of Money by Gamblers

AUSTIN, Texas.—James V. Allred, newly-inaugurated governor of Texas, has called upon the legislature to repeal the Texas racing law's provisions legalizing race track betting.

This law, in effect less than two years, has been disappointing to the state, because only a small part of the estimated tax revenues have been paid. It has aroused intense opposition of business interests and merchants of Houston, San Antonio, Dallas and Fort Worth, where the principal tracks are located.

Wagering has run at Epsom Downs, Reveston, Arlington Downs, near Fort Worth and Dallas, and Alamo Downs, San Antonio, close to $1,000,000 a day. Business interests say the races have drained the money that otherwise would have gone through channels of trade. Other interests complain that the professional race track followers, and not Texas betters, have won the money.

During the first year of its part-mutuel or "certificate" plan of betting, the state collected $352,500 in part-mutuel "take" percentage tax and license fees of tracks. The tax is one-fourth of the 10 per cent of bets reserved for the track operators.

The money was applied in this way:

Paying costs of state Department of Agriculture $196,000
Schools 74,910

Administrative costs of Racing Commission 14,544
Purchase of jacks and stallions for use by state Department of Agriculture in developing better farm livestock 6,570

Representative Harry N. Graves of Georgetown has introduced a bill to repeal the legalized betting, under the certificate form of part-mutuels. Governor Allred pledged repeal of legalized betting in his campaign, and wrote into the Democratic party platform a demand for repeal. Strong support has been pledged in the senate for repeal.

Governor Ferguson, who retired from office January 15, brought the repeal issue to a head by nominating to the Senate Guy L. Waggoner of Fort Worth for a second full term as chairman of the Racing Commission. The senate has held up consideration of his confirmation. Governor Allred will appoint no Racing Commission chairman if Mr. Waggoner fails of confirmation. Other members of the Racing Commission are State Tax Commissioner H. B. Anderson, who is in agreement with Allred, who appointed him in opposition to betting, and Agricultural Commissioner J. T. McDonald, interested only in the breeding of farm livestock, as affected by the racing law.

Senate Votes to Repeal "Run-Off"

Wilson Among 18 to Knock Out State Double-Primary Law

LITTLE ROCK.—The senate voted Wednesday by the smallest margin possible, 18 to 16, to repeal the 1933 run-off primary law following passage of a bill by Senator Lake to amend the law to provide, in effect, that the first election be preferential primary. The vote on the Lake bill was 18 to 14.

Senator Holloway of Lonoke county, author of the repeal bill, said the run-off law encouraged violation of the election laws and made it practically impossible for candidates to hold expenses within the statutory provisions. Four new bills were introduced, five passed and one defeated.

Senators Cole, Caldwell, Gilbert, Hardy, Evans and Ward of Lee spoke

Roosevelt Happy at Birthday Party

From White House He Addresses Radio Broadcast to Nation

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—Wearing a broad smile, President Roosevelt Wednesday night expressed his "deep personal happiness" to those participating in more than 7,000 birthday balls for the benefit of crippled children.

"I like this kind of a birthday," said the president in a nation-wide radio broadcast from the White House.

In such thousands did the letters and telegrams come that the presidential staff reported it impossible to answer them. Mr. Roosevelt noted this in his address.

Most of the president's brief speech was devoted to mention of the expansion of the work of the Warm Springs Foundation, and how 70 per cent of the funds raised would go toward aiding crippled children in or near their own communities.

New Motor Fuel Adds 30 M. P. H.

Army Air Corps Gets Sensational Results From New Gasoline

NEW YORK.—(AP)—A secret new motor fuel, developed by the Army Air Corps, adding 30 miles an hour to plane speeds, was described for the first time Wednesday at the annual meeting of the Institute of Aeronautical Sciences.

The new fuel is "100-octane," a kind of stuff which engineers have been calling the "fuel of the future." The Army Air Corps has had it for six months and it has lived up to the "dreams" which a short while ago were considered daring. If not fantastic.

The fuel was described by Lieut. F. D. Klein of the Army Air Corps. The name "100 octane" means the antiknock rating of the stuff.

Gasolines available to the public and to commercial aviation at present run up to only "87 octane." Lieutenant Klein said that a few months ago the Air Corps obtained 1,000 gallons of iso-octane.

This is a liquid from petroleum much like gasoline, but of higher quality. Technically it is called a "pentane." The Air Corps experts mixed this octane with 1,000 gallons of standard motor gasoline.

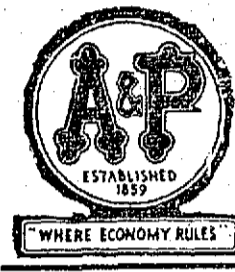

As a result they had 2,000 gallons of "100 octane" for experiment. They tried it in 100 pursuit planes, called P-26A's, in the Mitchell trophy race at Selfridge Field last November.

These planes flew a five-mile circular course. With the 100-octane they made a top speed of 216.8 miles an hour. This was an increase of about 35 miles an hour for the same type planes flying a similar course.

The largest air reservation in the world, Barksdale Field at Shreveport, La., now under construction, has a landing area 3 1/2 miles long and 1 mile wide. When completed it will have cost approximately $7,000,000.

The government spent nearly $1,000,000 for 50 homes for stranded miners at Arthurdale, the substantial tenement project located near Redsville, W. Va.

3 Are Convicted on Stolen Bonds

Jonesboro Federal Court Trial Ends in Convictions

JONESBORO, Ark.—Despite one of the most remarkable defenses ever seen in any court, A. G. Sauls of Birmingham, Ala., and his two co-defendants, E. E. Hamm and G. S. Sandifur of Jackson, Miss., were convicted in United States District Court here Wednesday on one count of an indictment charging them with having trafficked in stolen bonds.

That the clever acting of Sauls, who acted as lawyer for himself and the other men was not altogether wasted on the jury, however, was indicated by the fact that they were acquitted on two counts.

The three will be sentenced later, along with Jay H. Myers, Walnut Ridge banker and ex-legislator; John E. Gibson, planter of Lauriatown, Lawrence county; J. L. McKamey, ex-postmaster at Imboden; Sam Labow, Chicago druggist and Harry Greenberg of New York city, all of whom have pleaded guilty to charges in involving stolen bonds.

Myers and Gibson were the government's star witnesses against Sauls, Hamm and Sandifur during Wednesday's proceedings.

Charles S. Barnett, Jonesboro business man went on trial Wednesday on two indictments charging him with having handled stolen bonds and with having conspired with the five men who have pleaded guilty in a plot to dispose of more than $200,000 worth of stolen securities.

Purge of Relief Rolls Suspended

Dropping of Unemployables Halted, Pending Action by Congress

Copyright Associated Press

WASHINGTON—(AP)—The federal government, an authoritative source disclosed Thursday, has called a temporary halt in its drive to return the unemployables now remaining on its relief rolls back to the care of the states and home localities.

Although FERA officials said the goal of their campaign is in sight it was indicated officially that the aged, crippled and other unemployables still left on the rolls would be allowed to remain until after Roosevelt's social security program is enacted.

Margarine of Oil Import Faces Tax

10-Cents-Per-Pound Levy to Aid Cottonseed Oil Prices

LITTLE ROCK—The senate committee of agriculture, at a meeting Thursday night, voted unanimously to recommend passage of Senate Bill 146 by Senator Gregg of Jonesboro to place a tax of 10 cents per pound on oleomargarine made from coconut oil and other imported oils.

The action was taken after the committee had heard G. G. Henry, manager of the Mid-South Cotton Growers Association of Memphis; C. O. Moser of Washington, president of the Institute of American Fats and Oils, and A. K. Fisher, vice president of the John F. Jelke Company of Chicago, manufacturer of 100 per cent cottonseed oil margarine, present an array of figures designed to show that the proposed tax on margarine made from imported oils would open a new outlet for cottonseed peanut and other domestic vegetable oils, as well as animal fats.

Mr. Moser and Mr. Henry said a new method of making margarine from 100 per cent cottonseed oil, churned in white milk, has opened the possibility of consuming a large part of the annual production of cottonseed, if domestic oils can be protected against the cheaper imported oils.

Mr. Fisher said his company alone uses the oil from more than 100,000 tons of cottonseed annually and estimated that his company manufactures only about 10 per cent of the margarine made in this country. He said the company uses about 12,000,000 pounds of whole milk a year, thus being a large customer of the dairy industry.

It was brought out by Mr. Henry that Mr. Fisher's company normally will use each year cottonseed oil equivalent to the production from Arkansas' average cotton crop.

U. S. Dirigibles to Enter Sea Service

Government to Build Them, Private Management to Run Them

WASHINGTON—(AP)—A presidential message, recommending that all civilian aviation be placed under control of the Interstate Commerce Commission, was followed Thursday by senate approval of a measure to extend existing air mail laws to September 1.

"The air mail situation is an integral part of the entire aviation problem," Senator O'Mahoney, Democrat, Wyoming, author of the bill, said, "and my measure simply gives us a breathing spell to consider the message and the report. Otherwise existing contracts would have to be revised on March 1."

Along with Mr. Roosevelt's observations on aviation went the report of his special committee, headed by Clark Howell Sr., which has been studying air problems for months.

The president disagreed with one of the commission's recommendations—that for creation of a temporary Air Commerce Commission.

The Aviation Commission created last year after the air mail contracts were cancelled by Postmaster General Farley recommended:

That the United States meet trans-oceanic competition with government-constructed but privately-operated dirigibles.

Construction of a naval training airship to replace the 10-year-old Los Angeles.

Adoption of air expansion programs of the army and navy with 2,320 planes for the army and 1,910 for the navy.

That all airlines operating December, 1934, be considered to have a presumptive right to a certificate of convenience and necessity.

Assumption by the federal government of the cost of installing and part of the cost of maintaining lights and other aids to navigation at airports approved by the new Air Commerce Commission.

"Judge," said the foreman of the jury, "this lady is suing this man for $1,000 for a kiss."

"Correct," said the judge, "You gentlemen of the jury are to decide if it was worth it."

"That's the point," said the foreman. "Could the jury have a sample?"

"One of the tragedies of life," said Channing Pollock, at a banquet in honor of a famous theatrical man, "is the fact that no one ever gives us a dinner until we don't need it."

"Tramp" steamers work harder than any other type of ocean-going vessel.

NORTON RIDES MAN

has its source in the highlands of New Mexico where sub-zero weather is common in mid-winter. In the days before El Estero Butte Dam was built, floating chunks of ice were often seen as far south as El Paso.

Nurse to a Dying Man

While sitting in the lobby of Mesilla's only hotel that evening, a fellow approached me and asked if I would accept a job taking care of a sick man. He offered me room and board and two dollars a day. To a wandering boy, hundreds of miles from home, that offer came like manna from Heaven. I accepted it and was promptly installed as nurse. The sick man was known as "Red Mike." I never learned his real name. He was a stevedore and in the past had shown his bravery and heroism in more than one encounter with Indians and outlaws. One time he was attacked by Apaches who tried to stop his stage by shooting the horses. They succeeded in killing two of the six. Mike coolly climbed down off his seat, cut out the dead animals, and while he was rearranging his team, passengers peppered away with Winchester rifles at the Indians. Pushing his four-horse team to the limit, Mike made a getaway and carried his passengers to their destinations.

Mike had developed a case of pneumonia and was a very sick man when I assumed the duties of nurse. My instructions were to administer a tablespoonful of milk punch every hour. A cot was placed near Mike's bed and I managed to get a little sleep between ministrations.

The End

On the fifth day the Doctor informed me that my patient couldn't last much longer. The hotel proprietor requested me to call him if anything happened. I gave Mike a milk punch at midnight. When I rose at 1 o'clock to give him another, he was dead.

I called the landlord, but nothing could be done till morning. A Mexican was employed to prepare the body for burial. Poor Mike was laid to rest in a plain pine box—another brave man destined to lie in a neglected and soon-to-be-forgotten grave.

While I was taking care of Mike the men who had come to Mesilla with me left for some point up the river, so I decided to return to the railroad camp. Having a long distance to walk, I started at the break of day. The Mexican who had ferried us across the river could not be located, so I was forced to wade it myself.

Swims Through Ice
After locating what I thought was the ford, I removed every garment I was wearing, rolled them into a bundle with my boots and six-shooter in the middle, and strapped my belt tightly around it. Clad only in my birthday clothes—and incidentally it was January 20th, my 18th birthday—I gingerly stepped into the river and waded through thin sheets of ice until water was up to my navel, yet, I hadn't reached the middle of the stream. I realized I had missed the ford, but resolved to keep going. I struck out, swimming on my back with a peak of the Oregon Mountains sharply cutting the skyline to guide me. I trudged along and reached the railroad about 3 o'clock in the afternoon.

Thanks to a robust constitution and the resiliency of youth, I suffered no ill effects from my grueling experiences. After eating a hearty meal and taking a rest, I felt equal to contending with any new adventures that awaited me.
